Give Orphaned Children Education

Join me in Bringing Hope to the Orphans

During my visit to Jonglei State of South Sudan in the year 2013, I witnessed with my own eyes what the orphans are going through, it is what I went through 25 years ago. It is painful, it hurt, and I want to do something about it. Will you join me in fight to bring education to these orphans who are desperately in need of it?

Seeing orphaned children living on the street, going with no food, clothes, water, healthcare or education and no one helping them is something horrible and heartbreaking. Leaving orphans to live a street life and not giving them basic needs and education is bad for our society because it creates a certain life cycle in the communities where they come from. It creates an extreme line of poverty that take forever to address. You and I can help break this cycle.

Nothing is more important than investing in another human beings' life. Your contribution this year will have great impact in the lives of many orphans living in the Jonglei state of South Sudan. So join me with an open heart and let's keep educating the orphans. These orphans need men and women like you to help them. Together we can give orphans a better future.

Short life stories of orphans

Akur Mabior,

I lost both of my parents during the long civil war between South North Sudan. After my parents passed away I remained under the care of my old grandmother who took care of me during the war. Unfortunately she got too old enough and cannot provide support to me so that I can go to school. But I was luck and so grateful that DOF has come to my rescue. I would like to give back to orphans in future when I become educated woman. I have now learned that helping those in need is the most important thing to do.

Akech Majok Ajang,

My father got killed in 1996 as a result of the long civil war in Sudan; I was still not born. I was later born and named as "AKECH" meaning a child born following the death of a family member in Dinka dialect. My single mom brought me up. My mother used to work as a nurse in the hospital where she earns money for living and to care for me. Unfortunately, my beloved mother passed away in 2008 leaving me in a miserable life. I thought my life was going to remain miserable but God came to my rescue and DOF sponsored me. I am very thankful to the DOF founders and supporters of this initiative. My life has change and I hope Melinda will continue her support to my education. I also pray that many people outside there will step up and help this foundation so that many other orphans now living the street lives can get the same opportunity and join us in the school.
